

1811

John C. Calhoun was elected to the House of Representatives. He believed the U.S. should have a strong central govt but later changed his mind.

Calhoun married a wealthy girl. Her parents owned a large plantation and many slaves.

Calhoun soon became spokesman for the South.